! LOW June Green Tip of the Month

Do not throw away electronic equipment – recycle with a responsible/reputable recycler. Why? Electronic equipment contains harmful toxins, such as lead, mercury & cadmium. When released into the environment via improper disposal or disassembly, these chemicals can contaminate our water, land & air; damage or destroy fragile ecosystems; and, cause damage to coronary, respiratory, nervous & skeletal systems of individuals who are not using proper safety precautions when disassembling the equipment. When selecting an electronics recycling company, check that the vendor recycles responsibly – see e-stewards.org for a list of vendors in each state who recycle responsibly (click link for "Find Your Local e-stewards"). In addition, all Best Buy stores have an electronics-recycling program, though they will only accept 2 items per visit. For further information & education on the risks associated with improper disposal & handling, please see <http://www.GreenCitizen.com>
